THE BOY'S WORLD.

I wish the world were only what that raceal thinks it is A place for him to group in and a place only him to roup in and a place ond for his fine.

I wish that he might never less his drama but cling forever.

To the happiness of waking when his nights of sleep are done.

Oh, his eyes are wide with wonder at the sights that he is seving.
And there's nothing round about him has was fashioned for his joy!
He leves the world cach minute, and he's glad that he is in it.
And I would his rational visage and I wish I were a less.

Every grawing thing is larely and I wish that it would star so.
It is eyes have not discovered any trace of human care.
He has yet in find the hadness in the world or feel its andress.
For to him it is a garden that is gurgeous everywhere
